

Monetization

- Pay-what-you-want
- Pay for AI credits
- Pay for traffic
- One-time \(lifetime\) fee
- Recurring payments

Pay-what-you-want

Pay for AI credits

Pay for traffic

One-time (lifetime) fee

Once.com

The dilemma of this approach is that you can't be sure whether you earn more with a one-time fee or with a recurring payment. To solve this dilemma, you need to know your startup's LTV. Thus if you set up a one-time fee equal to or more than your LTV, having a one-time option is beneficial for your business.

B2C examples

The image displays three pricing cards for a B2C product, set against a dark purple background. Each card is white with rounded corners and contains pricing information and a call-to-action button.

- MONTHLY: The card shows a price of US$13.00 /month*. Below the price is a yellow button labeled SUBSCRIBE NOW.
- YEARLY: The card shows a price of US$89.99 with a note US$7.50 /month*. It also mentions 7 days free, then billed annually. A purple diagonal banner in the top right corner says BEST DEAL. Below the price is a purple button labeled START YOUR FREE WEEK.
- LIFETIME: The card shows a price of US$159.99 and notes it is a One-time purchase. Below the price is a yellow button labeled BUY NOW.

Recurring payments